

A Gray Stone Field (1)

A horrific tale of mass murder, treason and international intrigue set on a frozen Arctic island, the year - 1868. Captain Edward Crow, master of Her Majesties Ship, Goliath, sailed from London for Prince Patrick Island with top secret orders. The Crown has had no word from this island possession in over a month and dispatches the HMS Goliath along with its crew of sailors and a compliment of Rooyal Marines to investigate. Crow had no idea of what awaited him and his crew when they finally reached Prince Patrick Island - it appeared deserted of all life. A detachment of Royal Marines under the command of Captain Jacob Baldwin would land and begin a mission that would uncover an act of horrific murder in the name of experimentation. Baldwins first encounter was an Indian shaman by the name of Shononkin who delivered a frightening forcast of death and destruction, warning the men to turn back. Baldwin pressed on and his journey across the island brought him face to face with the Prussian ship, the Viktoria. The Viktoria was frozen in fast and had set up a beach head from which they operated. A party was sent back to the Goliath to warn Captain Crow of the Prussian presence and while returning to the ship, came under attack. Crow was told of the Viktoria and lifted anchor to sail around the island and confront the Prussian visitors. The ships met and an envoy from Gliath was sent to the Viktoria to learn why they were there. Matters worsened and Goliath became engaged in a day long battle that would sink the Viktoria along with many of her secrets. Crow returned to England and appeared before the Crow, telling his account of this violent encounter. His discovery would set the tone for warfare in World War I. Ronnie Franks brings the reader aboard the British Frigate and mingles you with the crew. Youll feel the frozen earth under your feet and the biting wind on your face. You'll venture out onto the ice in an unknown land.
