

When you begin to prefer your past either as an individual or a corporate entity, and wish them back, then there's a fundamental problem with growth and development. When people become so restless-footed; so easily provoked to take to the streets and shouts of occupation –occupy here; occupy there, occupy the south and north poles saturate the air, then it's an indication of a fundamentally flawed system of values. What makes the inhabitants of the earth brew with so much hate and antagonism? Could this be a case of Cain and Abel? These and lots of other themes are the main topics that agitate the mind of this poet –plus the Dancing Sun –a mysterious event that happens around the world. The author poetically dramatizes this phenomenon in a graphical illustration of one of the incidents. The Book features free verse, classical poetry, rhymes, sonnets and dramatized epic narratives. Be careful when you handle the Dancing Sun. It can make you smile, cry or even to laugh.
