

Liberty, fraternity, equality! . . . What noble heart could take fright at the triumph of such Christian principles? So the narrator of Ollers ironic tale of bitter disillusionment with youthful ideals asks himself only shortly before a mob of unruly revolutionaries comes to burn and pillage his familys house. To my way of thinking, writes Catalan diarist Josep Pla, the finest piece of writing, perhaps the best to emerge from the pen of the novelist Narcis Oller, is called The September Revolution. [...] It is an exemplary, perfect story subject to no momentary influence, highly perceptive, and extremely intelligent. Genre: short story Length: 5,800 words Translated from Catalan by G. Lopez de Gorgolas.
