

Taken Down in Evidence documents the working lives of the Irish police in three different parts of Ireland: urban (Dublin city centre), rural (Connemara) and border (Dundalk). Leo Regan spent 18 months with the Gardai, attaching himself to a unit and working with them on their often gruelling monthly rota of shift-work. This close association shows in the sense of trust that the photographer has established with the Garda. Leo Regan is a Irish documentary photographer and film-maker.
